

* A parse reading requires cached pages. The reader uses them only when cache coverage reaches 90% of the extracted page-text count. A cached parse is machine-read evidence, not extracted task JSON.

Blue/teal reader boxes call the extraction model; amber boxes make code-side decisions. Arrows carry evidence or JSON. Checks run before selection; the four lanes are alternatives, not four mandatory stages.